Geneva, Switzerland, September 14 , 2011---A preventative health enthusiast and ardent purist, Richard Steffan has concluded that “although the skin is a complex structure, it eagerly responds to simple diligent care”. For over three decades, Richard Steffan and his team of dermatologists, nutritionists and exercise specialists in Switzerland have determined that youthful skin is the result of both internal and external care of the body and not just topical care.

The company just released their new Anti-aging Crème Hydratante developed and formulated in Switzerland. It contains organic plant essentials as well as other effective, high quality ingredients.

Founded in 1978, Richard Steffan Skincare has been formulating and making high quality skincare products for over three decades in Switzerland. The products were first tested and used in the mid 1970’s by international flight attendants because of its simplicity and effectiveness with changing atmospheric conditions. Ingredients include organic elderberry extract, organic lavender water, organic sweet almond oil, organic sunflower oil, organic jojoba oil and natural citrus extracts.
